

Chapman University - Fowler School of Law, in sunny Southern California, is looking to fill the position, Research and Instruction Librarian.

The Research and Instruction Librarian provides reference and research services to law library users, teaches in the library's instructional program, and participates in collection development to fulfill the Law Library's role in supporting the research and educational needs of the Law School community. The Research/Instruction Librarian assists library users at the Research Help Desk, conducts and delivers in-depth research on requested topics, teaches legal research in a variety of settings, and works to develop and expand library services. This position requires a strong commitment to teaching legal research skills essential to the practice of law, a deep understanding of the Law School's curriculum, faculty research interests, library operations, legal information resources, and research methodologies in all formats. An MLS from an ALA accredited institution or an equivalent relevant advanced degree and a JD from an ABA accredited institution are required for this position. Salary range for this position is $75,000 - $81,000.

Please see the full job description or apply by going to the links provided. If you have any questions, feel free to reach out!